PLAN OF THE GALLERIES.

INTRODUCTION

THIS Catalogue illustrates and gives permanent value to the Exhibition that was held, during 1896, in the galleries of the Royal Glasgow Institute of the Fine Arts in commemoration of the Centenary of the death of Robert Burns.

The Exhibition was one of the greatest popular tributes ever paid to the memory of a Poet. Burns lies close to the heart of the Scottish people, and the Exhibition was the outcome of the gratitude a nation feels to him who has for all time expressed the emotions and aspirations that are the distinction and character of the nation's life. He is our own Poet: he voiced our humour and our pathos, our sympathies and our prejudices, our virtues and our shortcomings; and we in Scotland, grateful for his encouragement and counsel, treasure his words as precious possessions, and thank God for the gift of Robert Burns.

The Exhibition was an evidence of the hold his personality has upon the affection of his country. The places he lived in, the people he mixed with, the books he read, all the common surroundings of his daily life, have, in virtue of his association with them, acquired a classic fame. His hand has ennobled whatever it touched, and conferred upon it something of immortality. As the Catalogue shows, the Exhibition aimed at bringing together all the portraits, the pictures, the books, the relics that illustrate the life of our National Poet. The public verdict was that the purpose was achieved with at least as fair a measure of success as can ever attend the attempting of an impossible task. The infinite riches of Burns cannot be garnered within the limits of either space or time that are the necessary conditions of an Exhibition.

The conception of the Exhibition arose with Mr. Craibe Angus of Glasgow. In the actual carrying out of the idea into practical shape, the Council of the Burns Federation played a most important part, and with their knowledge of the situation helped to make the Exhibition possible. Mr. Craibe Angus and Captain David Sneddon, the Secretary of the Federation, acted from the outset as the Honorary Secretaries of the undertaking. To these gentlemen and to Mr. Andrew J. Kirkpatrick, the Chairman of the Royal Glasgow Institute, who was Chairman of the Burns Exhibition, Mr. Patrick S. Dunn, also of the Institute, who filled the position of Vice-Chairman, Mr. D. M'Naught, editor of the "Burns Chronicle," and to the various members of the Executive Committee, the success of the Exhibition is due. They laboured with an earnestness begotten of love for the work and knowledge of the subject. The public of Scotland are much indebted to the owners of Burns relics who made so generous a response to the Committee's applications for loans.

The Exhibition was formally opened on 15th July, 1896. At the inaugural meeting, presided over by Mr. Andrew J. Kirkpatrick, Mr. William Wallace was the principal speaker. On the evening of 21st July a public meeting in connection with the Exhibition was held in St. Andrew's Halls, Glasgow, at which Lord Rosebery presided and delivered an address which has become part of Burns literature.

The Exhibition was done well, and having been done once, has been done once for all, at least so far as the next one hundred years are concerned. It is safe to prophesy that while time may destroy the personal relics of the poet and his friends, it will have no power to wither his reputation or displace him from the stronghold he possesses in the affections of his fellow-countrymen.

PORTRAITS AND PICTURES

Although to the more earnest students of the life and writings of Robert Burns nothing within the walls could be regarded as equalling in interest the rich display of his unrivalled manuscripts, still it may be safely asserted that to the great majority of visitors to this unique and altogether remarkable Exhibition the collection of pictures constituted, without doubt, the supreme attraction. It contained over seven hundred works, and occupied, with striking effect, almost the entire wall-space of the galleries. It was divided into two sections, the one comprising pictures on loan, and the other, works for sale, the former being by far the larger and in every way the more important. The scope of the Exhibition naturally lent to the department devoted to "cauk and keel" an endless and charming variety. It embraced portraits of the poet, his relatives, friends, correspondents, critics, and editors; views of his several homes and the scenes amid which they are set; places of interest visited by him, and pictures in illustration of his writings. Many of these works were from the easels of distinguished painters, and, apart altogether from the interest attaching to their subject, were, in conception and execution, of high artistic excellence. Others, although not of this first rank, were nevertheless by artists of acknowledged ability, while one or two, the seriousness of whose aim could not for one moment be doubted, proved, even to the sober Scottish eye, keenly provocative of innocent merriment. But one and all, from the highest to the humblest, bore mute yet eloquent testimony to the wondrous sway exercised by Burns over the mind and heart of his countrymen.

In the Exhibition were to be seen three notable portraits of the poet. Two of these were from the brush of Alexander Nasmyth—one being the well-known painting belonging to the National Portrait Gallery, London, and the other the property of the Misses Cathcart of Auchendrane, whose mother was a pupil of the artist. Both pictures proved of exceptional interest; but it is to be regretted that the original portrait for which Burns gave sittings to Nasmyth, and of which those referred to are replicas, could not, after the most zealous effort on the part of the executive committee, be procured for exhibition from its custodiers, the Trustees of the National Gallery of Scotland. On the walls, however, of the galleries appeared, through the kindness of its owner, Sir Theodore Martin, K.C.B., the masterly drawing of the poet's head, executed in red chalk by Archibald Skirving. Another picture, which shared with these the distinction of attracting the most profound attention, was M'Kenzie's excellent portrait of "Bonie Jean and her grandchild." An added interest attaching to this painting arises from the fact that it was lent to the Exhibition by Mrs. Burns Hutchinson, the granddaughter therein depicted.

The life of Burns, as all the world knows, was mostly spent within the circumscribed area of the shires of Ayr and Dumfries, two counties which can assuredly lay claim to much of the finest scenery in southern Scotland. Most fittingly did these interesting districts receive ample and effective illustration. The Ayr, the Doon, the Afton, the Lugar, and the Nith, a group of lowland streams whose varied beauties have been for ever embalmed in the witching music of his song, were there presented under "a' their shows and forms." The once obscure villages of Tarbolton, Mauchline, and Catrine; the canny auld town of Ayr; wide-awake Kilmarnock, where first his works were given to the world; Edina, which turned upon him for a season its "dazzling blaze of favour"; and Dumfries, with its descending pensive twilight—all found rich pictorial record in this notable collection. And last, if not least, "the guid toun o' Saint Mungo," which at infinite pains gathered all these fine things together, and set them in orderly array before the public eye, was worthily, if modestly, represented.

The work of the sculptor was also in evidence throughout the rooms, replicas of several of the more important statues erected in honour of the bard throughout the world, and other deftly executed images in plaster, marble, and bronze, adding much to the interest of the Exhibition.

A careful selection has been made by the committee of some of the more outstanding pictures in the collection. These, artistically reproduced in black and white by our townsmen, the Messrs. Annan, will be found a valuable feature of this memorial volume.

No 20

Lent by the Right Honourable the Earl of Rosebery, K.G., K.T.

80A. Robert Burns as a youth.

CERTIFICATE ON BACK—"For many years previous to 1850 my father attended professionally an ancient widowed woman, then about 90 years old, called Mrs. Cunningham. She came from Ardrossan, Scotland, and was first cousin to Mary Campbell, Burns's Highland Mary. This portrait of Burns was painted for Mary Campbell. After her death it was given to Mrs. Cunningham and brought to this country about 1800. To ensure its preservation she gave it to my father, S. B. Barlow, M.D., in 1850.

"NEW YORK, 1881. (Signed) SAMUEL R. M. BARLOW."

Lent by the Misses Cathcart of Auchendrane.

90. Robert Burns.
Copy of the Inscription written by Mr. Alex. Nasmyth on the back of the canvas of the Portrait, at the time he sold it to Mr. Cathcart (father of the Misses Cathcart), in 1824:—
"Robert Burns, painted by Alex. Nasmyth, being one of three "pictures painted by him. The original picture, painted in "Edinburgh in 1787, is now in the possession of Mrs. Burns, "Dumfries. The second is in the possession of Mr. G. Thomson, "Edinburgh, 1824, and this picture in the possession of E. "Cathcart, Esq., Edinburgh.
Seal. [For Auld Langsyne.] "A. N., 1824."
Mrs. Cathcart, mother of the Misses Cathcart, studied oil painting under Mr. Alex. Nasmyth, and she had often admired this portrait of Burns which hung in the studio. After her marriage to Mr. Cathcart of Auchendrane she induced him to buy the portrait from Mr. A. Nasmyth, in 1824, and it has remained in the possession of the family ever since, and has been carefully preserved.

RELICS.

THE relics were exhibited in cases which occupied the centre of the large gallery, on the walls of which were hung the more important portraits and pictures placed at the disposal of the Committee. This room was the most popular feature of the Exhibition. Close to the walls, and running round the square of the apartment, the magnificent collection of the editions of the Poet's works was displayed to the fullest advantage in cases specially constructed for their reception. To the Burns student these were, of course, an inexhaustible source of interest, but to the average visitor, unlearned in the bibliography of Burns, they appealed in much the same way as a like number of unknown books on the shelves of a circulating library. After a glance at the rarer, earlier editions, his curiosity was satisfied, and he turned to the relics as more in accordance with his tastes and feelings. This is why such exhibitions need never hope to be great financial successes.

That Burns is a name to conjure with among the Scottish people requires no demonstration at this time of day, but the hero-worship of the masses does not, cannot possibly, express itself in appreciation of manuscripts, the niceties of a pure text, the merits of rival editions, or the typography and artistic binding of books. Within a circumscribed area interest may be quickened by displays of that kind, but no general enthusiasm is likely to be evoked. The most cursory examination of the relics which have been so carefully handed down from generation to generation, as indicating the field in which the popular sentiment most delights to exercise itself, confirms this view. They are all personal to the Poet or the individuals upon whom shone the reflected light of his genius. All are redolent of his humanity—scarce one of his spirituality. Burns is no abstraction to his countrymen. His poetry is embalmed in their hearts, and his overshadowing personality pervades and is ever associated with it. Hence it is that everything connected, in the remotest degree, with his earthly pilgrimage is guarded by all sorts and conditions of men with a solicitude that is apt to evoke a smile from those outwith the pale of the national feeling.

Glancing over the catalogue, we find slabs, polished and unpolished, labelled as at one time integral portions either of Mary's thorn, the rafters of Gavin Hamilton's house, the hostelry of Nanse Tinnock, the roof of Alloway Kirk, the barn at Mossgiel, the bed on which the Poet died, or of some tree which once grew on the Braes of Ballochmyle. For the authenticity of the exhibits their possessors are responsible, the Committee rightly deeming that it did not fall within their province to exercise any censorship in the matter. Though no hall-mark of genuineness can therefore be claimed on the ground of admission to the Exhibition, it is not to be supposed that any large proportion of the articles shown were of the nature of counterfeits. On the contrary, in nearly every instance the name of the exhibitor will be found sufficient guarantee, irrespective of the vouchers attached; and in a large majority of the entries the most exacting will fail to discover a flaw in the historical record.

Besides the rather cumbrous mementoes we have referred to, we have also such wholesale exhibits as the doors, windows, mantle-pieces, pulpit-desks, and locks of edifices the Poet rendered famous, as well as the chips and fragments of the same which testify to that spirit of vandalism which is generally so reprehensible, but which, in connection with Burns, seems to confine itself, for the most part, to what is already ruinous or hastening to decay. Even perishable articles of clothing have been sedulously preserved, for we have skirts, caps, hats, pillow-cases, chemises, handkerchiefs, scarfs, gloves, stockings, boots, shoes, in addition to more lasting personal adornments, such as brooches, rings, pins, lockets, and jewels, masonic and otherwise. The articles of furniture are almost innumerable, and formed a heterogeneous collection such as will certainly never be brought together again in the present generation. It included chairs, tables, cupboards, stools, trays, trunks, drawers, mallets, tongs, pokers, quaichs, cups, ladles, mugs, jugs, bickers, glasses, decanters, bottles of all shapes and sizes, gill-stoups, mutchkin-stoups, tappit-hens, tumblers, knives, forks, teapots, tea-cups, teaspoons, plates, bowls, pots, pans, mirrors, whips, spurs, walking sticks, knives, scissors, razors, swords, guns, pistols, dirks, spectacles, inkhorns, candlesticks, snuff-boxes, and tobacco pipes.

Even this formidable array does not by any means exhaust the list. Conspicuous among them, and second only in point of number and variety to those of the Poet himself, are the relics of Tam o' Shanter and Souter Johnny—the best of all possible proofs that never did the fictitious creations of an author take such complete and enduring possession of the sphere of the realistic. It is little short of the miraculous to find the remains of Douglas Graham and John Davidson exhibited in the same spirit of veneration as the personal belongings of those who were near and dear to the Poet, and received by the public with the same unquestioning faith. We verily believe, such is the wondrous hold the immortal "Tale" has upon the imagination of the Scottish people, that the veritable "pipes" which made the "roof and rafters dirl" might have been on view without exciting more than the mildest measure of surprise. When such a trifle as the tobacco pouch of the "bleth'rin" nonentity of Tarbolton is so carefully treasured as a memorial of the Poet, we need marvel less at the omnivorous stomach of the typical Burns relic-hunter than at the glowing enthusiasm which creates his appetite.

Of the exhibits in this section, the first from an artistic point of view is the arm-chair made from an oak beam taken from Alloway Kirk, and exhibited by Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen—a description of which will be found under the proper heading in the Catalogue. The main interest, however, centres in the valuable relics possessed by the descendants of the Poet's family, to particularise which would only be repeating the notes appended in the Catalogue. Chief among these are the Poet's watch and gloves, exhibited by Mrs. T. G. Burns, Knockmaroon, of Gilbert's family, and his seal, first engraved in Currie's edition, and now the property of Mrs. Burns Thomas, Killinick, the granddaughter of Robert, the Poet's eldest son, reproductions of which will be found among the illustrations. Almost on the same level as objects of curiosity are the apron and mallet which belonged to Burns, exhibited by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and the jewel and apron which he wore when officiating in St. James's Lodge, Tarbolton.

The collection of medals commemorative of the most important events in the posthumous history of Burns was full and representative, every celebration having a metallic souvenir, more or less valuable, in the receptacles provided for them in the cases. Casts of these were taken from the best impressions for the purpose of preserving their artistic merits in the photogravures which accompany the descriptive notes. The illustrations explain themselves by the reference numbers attached to them.

659. "The Auld Nick Horn."

About the year 1768, as the story goes, a highland bullock which had strayed from its pastures, entered Alloway Kirk, and getting fixed among the seats, became a prisoner. A day or so thereafter, a woman passing that way happened to look in at one of the windows, when lo! two huge horns suddenly appeared within, and she was greeted with a roar. Flying in terror, she raised the alarm that the deil was in the kirk. When this uncanny state of matters was looked into, the hungry four-footed "Nick" was discovered, and immediate steps taken to extricate it. In doing so, one of its horns was accidentally knocked off. This was taken to the neighbouring farm of Corton, at that time in the occupancy of the Tennants, and when this family removed shortly thereafter to Glenconner, in the parish of Ochiltree, the horn was taken with them, and was for long used as a bolting-tube for administering medicine to cattle. Burns as a boy heard the story, and it took such a hold of his young mind that many years thereafter he worked it into his world-renowned poem of "Tam o' Shanter." Readers will readily recall the lines—

> "A winnock-bunker in the east,
> There sat auld Nick, in shape o' beast," etc.

The horn, fitted at a later day with a silver mouthpiece, was used for many years in awaking the villagers of Ochiltree to their daily toil.

MANUSCRIPTS, INSCRIBED BOOKS, AND AUTOGRAPHS.

OTHER sections consist of material about Burns; that of the manuscripts is veritably Burns himself. There he is his own interpreter and exhibitor, and his literal and actual handiwork, though far from demonstrative in its own display, has yet formed for many who are studious of their Burns the most notable feature of the Exhibition. No such assemblage of his manuscripts was ever seen before. Burns himself never had beside him at any one time a collection in the least approaching it in extent or importance. It covers his entire career, and to designate it as his Life and Works, written by himself, would scarcely be a misdescription.

The pedigree and family fortunes are well set forth by documents reaching back to the marriage contract of his mother's father's brother in 1713. There are fragmentary traces of the handwriting of the boy of fourteen in his father's day-book. Other writings of his of early date are rare, until the year 1783 brings the first Commonplace Book, which, from whatever point of view regarded, is of prime significance and value. Not, however, until 1786, when the Kilmarnock edition was in the press and the author's reputation rapidly expanding beyond the confines of Ayrshire and the West, do his extant letters and MSS. begin to be at all numerous.

A chief interest of a literary man's manuscript consists in the evidence it affords of his style and method of composition. There is a charm, intense enough at times to be called emotion, in seeing, though flattened-out under a glass case, the actual original of a masterpiece, and in following the author's quill as it commits the winged word to immortality; but the interest is vastly heightened when the corrections in the piece or the changes revealed by collation of various copies show the selective and self-critical processes at work. That Burns, like all artists truly so called, was fastidious, and by no means easily satisfied with himself, is sufficiently well known, and is instanced in the letter with the "Fête Champêtre," exhibiting a sensitiveness and discomfort because, through inability to send an autograph of a poem, he has to be content with a copy—and that incorrect—in another's hand. He was generally, however, his own scrivener, and rarely had need, as Chaucer had, to anathematise his copyist. Corrections occur seldom, although there are many and wide divergences in his copies. His handwriting is as free of obscurities as his language. Perspicuity, gained by some men only after infinite trouble, must have been with him an instinct, which we know he cultivated and improved, chastening his easy composition by laborious revisals. Several pieces written to musical notation are visible tokens that his works are no untutored woodnote wild, but in large measure an educated product.

Most of the chief collections are present or represented, although the list is not complete, owing to the regrettable rigidity of rule in some public institutions and to special resolutions in others. To specialise the more important collections exhibited is difficult, because a single item may be enough to give first rank to the smallest group, if not to invest it with supreme quality for biographic or critical uses. The collections, or comparatively unbroken series which have as such passed down from original holders early in the century, have a particular value from their relative unity. This enhances the unique claims of the Dalhousie MSS., which, admirably preserved and quite unfaded (never having been exposed to sunlight), are mounted in one superb and massive volume. The collective character confers additional attraction also on the Knockmaroon manuscripts of Mrs. J. G. Burns, with their wealth of biographic memoranda, both primary and secondary, as it does on the family papers lent by Mr. Burns Begg, and the fine homogeneous series of letters sent by Mrs. Thomson Sinclair.

Distinction is hard to appraise, and it would be invidious to attempt to hold the scales of valuation as between the well-known collections from Kilmarnock and from Irvine—the latter comprising part of the printer's "copy" for the first edition—and smaller groups, such as those of the Corporation and University of Edinburgh. The exhibits of Lord Rosebery embrace beautiful autographs of several important poems. Those of Mr. A. C. Lamb (an enthusiastic collector, who has died since the Exhibition) likewise challenge high admiration. A group of letters and other pieces, in perfect condition and mounting, represents the collections of Mr. Alfred Morrison (also dead since the Exhibition), a collector unique amongst the class. Contributions from America fell short of expectations, owing to the refusal of some holders to consent to over-sea transmission of their relics. In exemplary contrast was the readiness of Mr. Robert B. Adam, of Buffalo, U.S.A., whose exhibits constitute in themselves quite an attractive miscellany.

Individual things of exceptional moment abound. The opening pages of the two Commonplace Books sufficiently mark the wide difference between the Poet in 1783 and in 1787—differences as plain in the handwriting as in the attitude of mind between the self-styled ploughman Robert Burness of the one and the man who has "seen a good deal of human life" of the other. The handwriting of the Poet is in the exhibits displayed in all its stages, beginning with the schoolboy's rather loose penmanship, passing through the early phase of the young ploughman and farmer, and developing at last into the bold, sweeping lines and dashing curves and gestures of the man in his prime of fame, who assuredly loved to write his best and had a pride in his pen. The earlier writing, as in the first Commonplace Book, slopes more, has fewer heavy down-strokes, is clerkly in its subdued style, and is throughout suggestive of more restraint and less self-confidence than the later hand, which tends towards the perpendicular, and carries in its swing and freedom a decided air of the man of business and of letters. The selection of autographs for reproduction, whilst showing this very well, illustrates at the same time both the personal and literary side of the Poet. His earlier penmanship appears in copies of the "Holy Fair" and the "Ordination," as well as in the first Commonplace Book. A transitional type is visible in the "Brigs of Ayr." A portion of a leaf from one of his Excise ledgers is a really beautiful bit of book-keeping.

It is needless to particularise, as the entries so fully explain themselves, and all that falls to be said in conclusion is that, in the choice of examples here reproduced, special preference has been accorded to the dedications or inscriptions made by the Bard in presentation of his own works or other books to friends. This was done partly because few of them have been facsimiled hitherto, partly because they are admirable specimens of his caligraphy, and by their terms bring out the man in some of his most intimate relations to his world. Good examples selected at random occur in the inscriptions to Lady Elizabeth Cunningham, Maria Riddel, Patrick Miller, "Glenconner," Elizabeth Burns, and the printer, William Smellie. Without exception, the dedications are dignified, and, having regard alike to the persons concerned and to the phrasing, are biographic documents of high account. They include several pieces of criticism and satire. The family registers from his father's Bible and his own (still in the keeping of his descendants) are—though often lithographed already—amongst the indispensable sanctities; and scarcely less so are the precious lines to Jessie Lewars, with their dying fall of mingled affection and farewell.

GEO. NEILSON.

The Holy Fair. — composed in autumn 1785

Upon a simmer Sunday morn
When Nature's face is fair,
I walked forth to view the corn
An' snuff the caller air;
The rising sun o'er Galston Muirs
Wi' glorious light was glenten,
The hares were hirpling down the furs,
The lav'rocks they were chanten
Fu' sweet that day.

As lightsomely I glowr'd abroad
To see a scene sae gay,
Three hizzies early at the road
Cam skelpin up the way;
Twa had manteels o' dolefu' black,
But ane wi' lyart linen,
The third, that gaed a wee aback,
Was in the fashion shinin
Fu' gay that day.

The twa appear'd like sisters twin
In feature, form an' claes;
Their visage wither'd, lang an' thin,
An' sour as onyslaes;
The third cam up, hap-step-an-lang,
As light as onye lambie,
An' wi' a cursche low dip'd down
Wi' poortith cauld the jawnie
Fu' kind that day.

An' bonnet aff, quoth I, sweet lass
I think ye seem to ken me,
I hope ye don't that bonie face
I hardly canna name ye;
Ha, an' wi' as the thank
An' takes me by the hands
Wi' a' the ten commands

1038-1043. THE ADAM COLLECTION.

CASE A

1. Inscription "written on the blank leaf of a copy of the last edition [? 1793] of my poems, presented to the lady whom, in so many fictitious reveries of passion, but with the most ardent sentiments of real friendship, I have so often sung under the name of—Chloris."

   This is evidently a draft of the Inscription.

2. Address to Edinburgh.

   The only other known copy is that presented by Burns to Lady Don, and now in the library of the University of Glasgow.

3. Draft copy of the Epistle to Robert Graham, Esq., of Fintry, requesting a favour.

4. Revised copy of above.

   This is the First Epistle to Graham, composed in 1788.

5. Draft copy of the Second Epistle to Graham of Fintry, dated 5th October, 1791.

   The lines commencing "O Dulness, portion of the truly blest" were inscribed in a letter to Mrs. Dunlop of Dunlop, on 1st January, 1789. (See No. 15.)

6. "The auld man's mare 's dead."

   This version copied by Burns is not generally known.

7. Ode to Washington.

   No other copy of the whole of this ode in the Poet's handwriting is known. This was purchased at a sale in London in 1892.

8. Inscription on a copy of his poems [Kilmarnock, 1786] which he "sent to an old sweetheart then married."

   Paraphrase of Jer., ch. xv. 10.

9. Fragment. Elegy intended for Miss Burnet.

   The finished elegy has one introductory and two concluding verses not in this copy.

CASE B

10. Letter [unpublished] to William Dunbar, Writer to the Signet, St. David Street, Edinburgh, to which are prefixed the original and the altered lines written in Carse Hermitage.

11. Letter to A. Cunningham, Edinburgh, dated Dumfries, 5th February, 1792.

Holy Willie's Prayer.

And send the Godly in a pet to pray — Pope.

O Thou that in the heavens does dwell!
Who, as it pleases best Thyself,
Sends ane to heaven and ten to h—ll,
A' for Thy glory;
And no for ony good or ill
They've done before Thee.

I bless and praise Thy matchless might,
When thousands Thou hast left in night,
That I am here before Thy sight,
For gifts and grace,
A burning and a shining light
To a' this place.

What was I, or my generation,
That I should get such exaltation?
I, who deserv'd most just damnation
For broken laws,
Sax thousand years ere my creation
Thro' Adam's cause.

Yet I am here, a chosen sample,
~~To show Thy grace is great and ample;~~
I'm here, a pillar o' Thy temple,
Strong as a rock;
A guide, a ruler and ensample
To a' Thy flock.

But yet, O L—d, confess I must:
At times I'm fash'd wi' fleshly lust;
And sometimes too in warldly trust
Vile self gets in;

12. Letter to Mr. Hill at Mr. Creech's, Edinburgh, dated Mauchline, 19th July, 1787.

13. Letter to Mrs. Dunlop of Dunlop House, Stewarton, dated Ellisland, 4th March, 1789, and bearing the Dumfries post-mark of 9th March.

14. Letter [unpublished] to David Staig, Esq., Dumfries, undated.

15. Letter to Mrs. Dunlop of Dunlop, inscribed in which are twenty lines commencing "O Dulness, portion of the truly blest," intended to be interwoven in "The Poet's Progress."

16. Portion of Excise Book kept by Burns.

17. Letter [unpublished] to William Dunbar, Writer to the Signet, St. David Street, Edinburgh.

18. Letter to Professor Dugald Stewart, dated "Ellisland, near Dumfries, 20th Jany., 1789."

Accompanying this letter was a copy of the Epistle to Graham of Fintry, probably No. 4.

CASE C

19. Ode to the departed Regency Bill.

Scott Douglas stated in 1878 that the copy in Captain Riddel's volume was the only known manuscript. This copy has seven lines not in that manuscript, and they are hitherto unpublished. The first two unpublished lines are—

"By Opposition's eager hand, Grasping at an airy wand."

The other five form the sixth to the tenth lines of the third stanza, and are as follows:—

"An' who are these that equally rejoice?
Jews, Gentiles, what a motley crew!
The iron tears their flinty cheeks bedew,
See how unfurled the parchment ensigns fly,
And Principal and Interest all the cry."

20. Letter to Mrs. Walter Riddel, Halleaths, undated.

August, 1795, is the date assigned to this letter.

21. Fragment of Letter to Clarinda, signed "Sylvander."

This is a fragment of letter No. 22 in M'Lehose's "Correspondence between Burns and Clarinda." It was sold in this condition by auction in Edinburgh on Friday, 10th May, 1844.

22. Burns's second Letter to Clarinda.

This letter was written on Saturday, 8th December, 1787, from No. 2 St. James Square, Mr. Cruickshanks' house, to which Clarinda addressed the letter No. 28 in this collection to him. The signature "Robt. Burns" has been cut out. The words cut out on the other side of the leaf by this were "The Cushion. So if I don't".

23. Masonic Invitation addressed to Dr. Mackenzie, dated 14th June, A.M. 5790 [1786] inserted in a volume of Chambers's edition opposite the printed copy, which differs slightly from the MS.

24. Letter to Clarinda, signed "Sylvander."

The date assigned to this letter is 14th March, 1788.

CASE D

25. Letter from Mrs. M'Lehose [Clarinda] to Miss Lyle of Camus Eskin, Dumbarton, afterwards of Manchester, dated 20th April, 1825.

This letter is interesting as showing Mrs. M'Lehose's powers as a correspondent. The letter is of a gossipy character, with several religious reflections.

26. Mrs. M'Lehose's Bible, with her autograph on the title. [1790.]

27. Letter from Mrs. M'Lehose [Clarinda] to Miss Lyle, dated 18th February, 1825.

28. Letter from Clarinda [Mrs. M'Lehose] to "Mr. Burns at Mr. Cruickshanks', No. 2 St. James Square, New Town."

This letter is No. 8 in M'Lehose's "Correspondence between Burns and Clarinda."

29. Portrait of Clarinda about 1825.

This portrait was acquired by Mr. Adam along with Nos. 25, 26, 27, 28, 30, and several other relics of Burns's favourites.

30. Letter from Mrs. M'Lehose [Clarinda] to Mr. Aitken, dated "14 Calton Hill, 25th October, 1831."

The reference to Demerara is in connection with her grandson's proposed settling in that island.

31. Original MS. of Bonie Jean or "There was a lass and she was fair."

The following interesting certificate is pasted on the blank paper at the end of the MS.:—

"Dumfries, June 29th, 1838. The above is the original copy of Burns' song or Pastoral Ballad on Miss Jean Macmurdo of Milnhead, and it is in his own handwriting. It will be seen that it differs considerably from the printed copy in the fourth volume of his Works as edited by Dr. Currie of Liverpool. It is a curious and striking illustration of the Poet's own declaration that all his poetry was the result of easy composition and laborious correction. The manuscript was presented by me to my friend, Mr. Smith of English Street, Dumfries. Robert Burns, eldest son of the Poet."

32. An Epistle to Davie, a brother Poet, Lover, Ploughman, and Fiddler. Jan., 1785.

Lent by J. J. Greenshields.

1044. Unfinished Poem, in Burns's autograph, undated—"Fintry, my stay in worldly strife." (See No. 1031.)

Printed vol 1 pa 157

As I have seen a good deal of human life in Edin.r, a great many characters which are new to one bred up in the shades of life as I have been, I am determined to take down my remarks on the spot. — Gray observes in a letter of his to Mr Palgrave that "Half a word fixed upon or near the spot is worth a cart load of recollection." —— I don't know how it is with the World in general, but with me, making remarks is by no means a solitary pleasure. — I want some one to laugh with me, some one to be grave with me; some one to please me and help my discrimination with his or her own remark, and at times, no doubt, to admire my acuteness and penetration. — The World are so busied with selfish pursuits, ambition, vanity, interest or pleasure, that very few think it worth their while to make any observation on what passes around them; except where that observation is a sucker or branch of the darling plant they are rearing in their fancy. — Nor am I sure, notwithstanding all the sentimental flights of Novel writers & the sage philosophy of Moralists, if we are capable of so intimate and a coalition of friendship as that one of us may pour out his bosom, his every thought and floating fancy, his very inmost soul, with unreserved confidence to another, without hazard of losing part of that respect man demands from man; or, from the unavoidable imperfections attending human nature, of one day repenting his confidence. —

For these reasons, I am determined to make these

Observations, Hints, Songs, Scraps of Poetry &c. by Robt Burness

a man who had little art in making money, and still less in keeping it; but was, however, a man of some sense, a great deal of honesty, and unbounded good-will to every creature rational or irrational. As he was but little indebted to scholastic education, and bred at a plough-tail, his performances must be strongly tinctured with his unpolished, rustic way of life; but as I believe, they are really his own, it may be some entertainment to a curious observer of human nature to see how a plough-man thinks, and feels, under the pressure of Love, Ambition, Anxiety, Grief with the like cares and passions, which, however diversified by the Modes, and Manners of life, operate pretty much alike I believe, in all the Species ——

There are numbers in the world, who do not want sense, to make a "figure; so much as an opinion of their own abilities, to put them upon recording their observations, and allowing them the same importance which "they do to those which appear in print" —

I have hitherto deferred the sublimer, more pathetic airs, untill more leisure, as they will take, & deserve, a greater effort. However, they are all put into thy hands, as clay into the hands of the Potter, to make one vessel to honor, & another to dishonor. ——— Farewel.

Lent by the Honourable J. C. Maxwell Scott.

1109. Manuscript of "Tam o' Shanter," corrected by Burns and addressed by him to Robert Ainslie.

This manuscript belonged to Sir Walter Scott, and bears an inscription by him to the following effect:—

"This manuscript of the inimitable Tam of Shanter is addressed and corrected by Burns's own hand. Mr. Ainslie says that when Burns recited it to him at Ellisland he added these two verses, which do not occur in the printed copies. The second line is admirable—

'The crickets joined their chirping cry,
The kitlin chased her tail for joy.'

These lines were perhaps rejected because the first resembles one in the ballad of 'Edwin and Angelina.'"

1184. Two Letters from James Burness, Montrose, to Gilbert Burns, in reference to a branch of the family in Carolina, dated (1) Montrose, 31st August, 1826, and (2) 23rd September, 1826.

O The Brigs of Ayr; — A true Story
Inscribed to John Ballantine Esq. Ayr —

O, he simple Bard rough at the rustic plough,
Learning his toiseful trade from ev'ry bough,
O, he chanting Linnet, or the mellow Throsh,
Hailing the setting sun, sweet in the green-thorn bush,
O the soaring Lark, the perching Redbreast shrill
Or deep-tin'd Plovers gray, wild-whistling o'er the hill,
Shall he, nurst in the Peasant's lowly shed,
O, to hardy Independence bravely bred,
By early Poverty to Hardship steel'd,
And train'd to arms in stern Misfortune's field,
Shall he be guilty of their hireling crimes,
O, The venile, mercenary Wits of rhymes?
Or labor hard the panegyric close,
With all the venal soul of dedicating Prose?
No! though his aims strain the rowdy strings,
And throws his hand uncouthly o'er the strings,
He glows with all the spirit of the Bard,
O, Fame, honest Fame, his great his dear reward.
Still, if some Patron's generous care he trace
Skill'd in the secret, to bestow with grace;
When B——— befriends his humble name,
And hands the rustic Stranger up to fame,
With heart-felt throes his grateful bosom swells,
O, The godlike bliss, to give, sometimes excels. ———

'Twas when the Stacks get on their winter hap,
An' thack an' rapp secure the toil-won crap;
Potatoe-bings are snugged up frae skaith
O' coming Winter's biting, frosty breath;
The Bees rejoicing o'er their Summer toils,
Unnumber'd buds and flow'rs' delicious spoils,
Seal'd up wi' frugal care in massive, waxen piles,
Are doom'd by man, the tyrant o' the weak,
The death o' Devils — smoor'd wi' brimstane reek;

1205. Original MS. of the Pastoral Poem of the "Gentle Shepherd," by Allan Ramsay.

This MS. was presented by the Poet in March, 1737, to his patroness, Susanna, Countess of Eglinton, by whom it was presented to James Boswell, the celebrated biographer of Dr. Samuel Johnson. It remained in the Auchinleck Library until two or three years ago, when the contents of the Library were dispersed at Sotheby's, by the Hon. Mrs. Mounsey.

Allan has prefaced the following note:—

"The Gentle Shepherd: A Scots Pastorall Comedy. By Allan Ramsay. "Written in the years 1724 and 1725, at the 40th of his age.—This "is the originall manuscript from which the coppys were printed; "Presented to my Patroness, March 2d, 1737, after my having "seen reprinted Six Editions of it, a thousand each time in Edr., "besides two in London, one in Dublin, and one in Glasgow— "and be it kend to you, curious posterity, that the performance "has received the universall approbation, as I hope it will from "you Thousands of years hence. N.B.—The additional songs "were added to the Fourth Edition about the year 1732 by the "author."

There is also the following explanatory note on the cover by Sir Alexander Boswell (who was killed in the duel in 1822 with Stuart of Dunearn):—"This MS. was presented to my father "(with flattering expressions of regard) by Susanna, Countess of "Eglinton, the last time he visited her. I have preserved the "original binding to shew the form in which Allan offered it at "the Shrine of Susanna. I have put 1725 as the date, tho' the "dedication appears to have been 35, and altered by the author "to 25, 1804.

Lecture.

Poor Merry-andrew, in the neuk,
Sat guzzling wi' a tinkler hussie;
They mind't na wha the chorus teuk,
Between themselves they were sae busy:
At length wi' drinkin' an' courting dizzy,
He stoitered a step an' made a face;
Syne tun'd his pipe wi' grave grimace

Air. Tune, Auld Sir Symon.

Sir Wisdom's a fool when he's fou;
Sir Knave is a fool in a Session,
He's there but a prentice, I trow,
But I am a fool by profession.
My grandmother gaed me a kick,
An' I held aud to the school;
I fear I my talent mistuk,
But what wad ye hae of a fool.

For drink I would venture my neck;
A hussie ~~I the~~ half of my kraft:
But what could ye other expect
Of ane that's ~~a verry daft~~

I, ance, was tied up like a stick,
For civilly swearing and quaffing;
I, ance, was aburd'd i' the kirk,
For towsing a lass i' my daffin.

Poor Andrew that tumbles for sport
Let nae body name wi' a jeer;

Lent by Charles Stuart Burness.

1235. Covers of Bible, with registers of births, etc., of the Poet's uncle Thomas and his descendants.

The above-named Thomas was born in Glenbervie, Kincardineshire, in February, 1728, and migrated into England. He returned, however, some years after, and died in his native place. He spelt his name Burnes, but his sons and daughters, of whom he had several, spelt theirs Burness. The owner of these covers, Mr. C. Stuart Burness, is a great-great-grandson of the above-named Thomas. The interior of these Bible covers was burnt by an ignorant servant girl who, morning by morning, pulled leaves therefrom to kindle the fire, much to the regret and pain of Mr. C. S. Burness's father, Mr. Benjamin Thomas Burness, in whose service she was.

1248. Article on Allan Cunningham's "Life of Burns," written by Alexander Findlater, contributed to "Johnston's Edinburgh Magazine."

The article calls in question some statements by Cunningham as to Burns's connection with the Excise, and the treatment he received at the hands of the Board of Excise.

Dear Brother

It will be no very pleasing news to you to be told that I am dangerously ill & not likely to get better – An inveterate rheumatism has reduced me to such a state of debility, & my appetite is totally gone, so that I can scarce stand on my legs. – I have been a week at sea-bathing, & I will continue there or in a friend's house in the country all the summer – God help my wife & children, if I am taken from their head! – They will be poor indeed. – I have contracted one or two serious debts partly from my illness these many months & partly from too much thoughtlessness as to expence when I came to town that will cut in too much on the little I leave them in your hands. –

Remember me to my Mother. – Yours

July 10th 1796. R Burns

1318. Letter from Agnes Burns, sister of the Poet, to her youngest sister Isobel (Mrs. Begg); with verses on the troubles of this world, dated 30th January. (Year torn off, but supposed to be first or second year of present century.)

grateful attachment to him, which was indeed so strong that it pervaded my very soul, & was entwined with the thread of my existence; so soon as the Prince's friends had got in, (& every dog you know has his day) my getting forward in the Excise would have been an easier business than otherwise it will be. — Though this was a consummation devoutly to be wished, yet, thank Heaven, I can live & rhyme, as I am; & as to my boys, poor, little fellows, if I cannot place them on as high an elevation in life, as I could wish; I shall, if I am favored so much of the Disposer of events as to see that period, take care to fix them on as broad and independant basis as possible. — Among the many wise adages which have been treasured up by our Scotish Ancestors, this is one of the best — "Better be the head o' the Commonality, as the tail o' the Gentry".

But I am got on a subject, which however interesting to me, is of no manner of consequence to you; so I shall give you a short poem on the other page, & close this with assuring you how sincerely I have the honor to be

Sir, your obliged & ever grateful, humble servt.

ARM CHAIR.

"A chair made from an oak beam taken from 'Alloway's auld haunted kirk,' a little obscure roofless ruin in Ayrshire, whose existence out of its own immediate locality was hardly known till it became an object of veneration and pilgrimage on account of its having been chosen by Burns as the scene of the demon revelry so graphically described in his tale of 'Tam o' Shanter.' Such, however, is the interest which the genius of the Bard has thrown over the spot, that what was formerly the obscure resting place of the rustic dead has now become a crowded and fashionable place of sepulture. The poem itself is engraved in Gothic-shaped brass panels in the back of the chair, and below is a certificate attesting the genuineness of the relic. On the back is also a painting of Tam o' Shanter, with coat of arms over same. The chair was made by John Underwood, Cabinetmaker in Ayr, in the year 1822. The name of the painter of the picture is not recorded."

BOOKS

THE following pages contain a list of the various editions of the works of Burns, and of books relating to his life, personality, genius, and influence, so far as these books were shown in the Exhibition. The list forms an important contribution to the bibliography of Burns; but notwithstanding its fulness, and with all due recognition of the pioneer labours of Mr. James M'Kie and Mr. James Gibson, it must be said that the final Bibliography of Robert Burns is reserved for the future.

Many monuments have been raised to commemorate the genius of Burns; many and diverse are the ways in which the admiration and affection of his countrymen, and of the English-speaking world, have found expression. But it may be doubted if any such memorial is more truly significant than this catalogue. In other sections of the Exhibition, among the portraits, the relics, and, above all, the manuscripts, the visitor was, no doubt, brought into nearer and more personal relation with the Poet than in this; but here we have the most direct and unchallengeable evidence of the extent, the depth, and the permanence of the sway and sovereignty which Burns possesses over the general mind. The books here recorded were produced to meet and satisfy a popular demand, and in the incessant and perpetual issue and re-issue of editions of every kind and grade, from the hasty reprint to the elaborately and exhaustively edited, from the stately quarto to the humble chap-book of the hawker, we see as in no other way how universally his influence is felt.

That the collection of Burns books here described is by far the largest ever brought together it is hardly necessary to say. The most important division, namely, that comprising British editions of the Poet's works, probably does not come very far short of completeness. Time and observation will no doubt reveal the existence of editions not included here; but it is unlikely that such discoveries will, at any time, exceed, say, ten per cent. of the number exhibited. As it stands, this part of the collection may be accepted as representing what has been done in the United Kingdom in the publication of Burns's works.

The manner in which the editions ought to be arranged in the cases was the subject of long and careful consideration, and after attentive examination of the various methods possible, the following order was decided on :—The books were first divided according to the nationality of their origin, Scottish, English, Irish. Then those of each country were arranged so as to bring together such as were issued in the same town. The next step was to further divide those of each town under the names of their publishers, and finally the issues of each publishing house were arranged in order of date.

An attempt is here made to analyse the list, with a view to show how many editions have been published in each of the three kingdoms, and in each town or city. The question "What is an edition?" arose at the outset. The volumes are variously described as "works," "complete works," "poetical works," "poems," "songs," "selections," "prose works," "letters," and otherwise. Should each be accepted as an "edition"? Again, very many of the entries are re-issues of previous editions, often with no other difference than a change of date. Is each issue to be called an "edition"? As the object of the enquiry is to show how frequently Burns has been printed, the answer to both questions is in the affirmative, notwithstanding the injury which this answer does to the dignity of the term "edition." It should be stated that copies which differ from others only in the binding are not counted editions, nor are large-paper issues of editions which appear in their ordinary form. The various copies of the Clarinda correspondence (Nos. 811 to 829), and the editions of single poems (No. 1241 forward), are not included.

With these explanations the analysis is given.

There were exhibited 696 editions, comprising 1017 volumes, issued by 243 publishers in 32 cities and towns of the United Kingdom. Of these, 303 editions, in 481 volumes, by 115 publishers, in 18 towns (including Berwick, annexed for this purpose) are due to Scotland. In England there were issued 359 editions, in 481 volumes, by 112 publishers, in 11 towns. In Ireland, 34 editions, in 55 volumes, by 16 publishers, in 3 towns. It is not a little singular that the number of volumes in English editions is precisely the same as in Scottish editions. The number of editions published in England being larger, it is evident that the proportion of single volume editions is greater there than in Scotland.

The details of the analysis are as follows :—

While the British section of editions of Burns is thus fully representative, it is probable that the American and foreign sections are much further from being complete. In the United States, where Scottish sentiment is both strong and widely diffused, there must have been a very much larger number of editions issued than the sixty or seventy named here (Nos. 746 to 810). Only four of the greater cities are represented, while wealthy, populous, and progressive centres like Washington, Chicago, Cincinnati, San Francisco, St. Louis, and New Orleans do not appear at all. The presence in the list of relatively small places like Salem and Wilmington may be taken as evidence that Burns has been much more widely and frequently reprinted in the United States than would appear from this collection. But while it cannot be considered complete, or perhaps even representative, it nevertheless contains many editions of interest and rarity, including the two earliest printed in America.

The collection of translations and continental editions gives us Burns as he appears in thirteen foreign tongues, in which category the curious will observe that English is included.

Following the editions, we have a large number of books entered under the general heading of "Burnsiana, including Biographies, Criticisms, and Reviews." Extensive as this division is, it must be regarded rather as a large and interesting selection than as an exhaustive collection. Many of the books here included are of the highest interest; in some are brought to light facts in the Poet's life not previously generally known. The earliest and most famous criticisms of the poems were shown; the chief biographies; works by friends and contemporaries of Burns. Under the title, "The Land of Burns," are entered books which throw a strong and pleasing light on the Poet's environment, the beautiful country in which his days were spent. A group of books headed "Poets' praise of Burns" contains some distinguished names, the advanced guard only of the noble army of poets who from his day to ours have saluted Burns as master, in verse of every degree of excellence and exaltation.

Mention must be made of a number of copies of Burns and other books in special and beautiful bindings (No. 1098 onward), which are minutely described in the catalogue. The bookbinders whose work was shown include Cobden-Sanderson, Holloway, Rivière, Tuckett, and Zaehnsdorf, the last-named being by far the most largely represented.

The contributors to this unique exhibition of Burns books number more than a hundred and fifty. Their names will be found in the index of lenders, with references to the numbers of exhibits sent in. Each contributed according to his means and opportunity, and all were inspired with equal goodwill to the Exhibition. Mr. W. Craibe Angus placed his unrivalled Burns library, rich in copies in original condition, unreservedly at the disposal of the committee; and he supplemented this liberality by the most ungrudging labour in directing the arrangement of the books. Mr. Andrew Gibson, of Belfast, from his extensive and most valuable collection, contributed numerous editions both of early and late date, and especially the long series of editions prepared for popular circulation which tell so eloquently of the demand for Burns which exists among the masses. Dr. Alex. Patterson, of Glasgow, is also among the possessors of a Burns library of large extent, and from it were selected many curious and interesting and rare books. The Burns Museum at Kilmarnock, and the Mitchell Library, Glasgow, lent freely from their respective stores. Valuable loans were also received from Mr. R. T. Hamilton-Bruce, Mr. J. MacNaught Campbell, Mr. George Gray, Mr. William Jacks, Mr. Andrew J. Kirkpatrick, Mr. B. B. Macgeorge, the Earl of Rosebery, Mrs. Burns Thomas, and many others.

Separate reference must be made to two exhibits which conferred singular distinction on the Exhibition. Two copies were shown of the original Kilmarnock edition of 1786, which were still in the blue paper covers in which the book was issued. In this condition the book is undoubtedly one of the rarest in the world. One of the copies was lent by Mr. George Seton Veitch, of Paisley. The other was lent, together with an extensive and most interesting collection of Burns books and autographs, by the late Mr. A. C. Lamb, of Dundee. Mr. Lamb's exhibit was kept apart from the general collection of Burns books, and the catalogue of it, prepared by Mr. Lamb himself, will be found following the general list. Since the close of the Exhibition the collection has, in consequence of the sudden and regretted death of its owner, been dispersed. At the sale this original copy was sold for the not only unheard-of but unthought-of sum of £572, and Burns thus, in the court of the auctioneer, offered a challenge to Shakespeare himself.

But for a full recognition of the assistance rendered by each generous lender, who, whether sending few books or many, helped to make the Exhibition the success it undoubtedly was, reference must be made to the index.

With the view of facilitating the use of the catalogue for consultation and reference, an index of editors, critics, biographers, and translators has been added; and the liberality of the publishers has provided a chronological list of the dated editions, a feature both of interest and of practical value. The undated editions appear in the body of the catalogue, under the names of the respective towns where they were published.

KILMARNOCK.

Nos. 288-295 (inclusive) are copies of the numerous issues of the reprint, by James M'Kie, of the first edition of Burns's Poems.

The work—which, in text and otherwise, is at variance with the original—follows the text, including misprints, with a fidelity unknown in works of the kind. Had the paper on which the work is printed and the style of the cover been in conformity with Wilson's book, the reprint would have been unique among fac-similes.

Lent by Dr. Patterson.

END OF PART I.

166. I never drink——I cannot do it, on equal terms with others——It costs them only one day——but me three——the first in sinning, the second in suffering, and the third in repenting.

168. Sight is by much the noblest of the senses. We receive our notices from the other four, through the organs of sensation only. We hear, we feel, we smell, we taste, by touch. But sight rises infinitely higher.—It is refined above matter, and equals the faculty of spirit.

167. To put ourselves in other persons places, would obviate a great deal of the jealousies and resentments we are too frequently sensible of toward them; and to put others into ours, would considerably abate the pride and haughtiness of ourselves.

169. Freethinkers are generally those who never think at all.

170. Sir Isaac Newton used to say, that it was mere labour and patient thinking, which had

Jeremiah 15 Ch. 10 Verse

Wae is me, my Mother dear
A man of strife ye've born me
For fair contention I maun bear
They hate revile and scorn me

I ne'er could lend on bill or band
That five per cent might blight me
And borrowing, on the tither hand
The deil a ane would trust me

Yet I, a coin-denyed Wight,
By Fortune quite discarded
Ye see how I am, day and night
By lad and lass blackguarded

To John M'Murdo Esquire
Drumlanrig

Will Mr M'Murdo do me the favor to accept of these Volumes; a trifling, but sincere mark of the very high respect I bear for his worth as a Man, his manners as a Gentleman, & his kindness as a Friend. — However inferior, now, or afterwards, I may rank as a Poet; one honest virtue, to which few Poets can pretend, I trust I shall ever claim as mine: — to no man, whatever his station in life, or his power to serve me, have I ever paid a compliment at the expence of Truth.

Lent by the Mitchell Library.

879. The Glasgow Mercury, July 13-20, 1786. [4to.]

Contains advertisement of the sailing, from Greenock, on 10th August following, of the "Brigantine Nancy, Andrew Smith, Master."

"My hour is now come—you and I will never meet in Britain more. I have orders, within three weeks at farthest, to repair aboard the Nancy, Captain Smith, from Clyde to Jamaica, and to call at Antigua."—Burns to John Richmond, 30th July 1786.

Lent by D. Brown.

880. The Edinburgh Evening Courant, November 13, 1786. [Fol.]

Contains letter, signed "Allan Ramsay," regarding Burns.

". . . The county of Ayr is perhaps superior to any in Scotland in number of Peers, Nobles and wealth commoners; and yet not one of them has upon this occasion stepped forth as a patron to this man, nor has any attempt been made to interest the public in his favour. His poems are read; his genius is applauded; and he is left to his fate."—Extract from letter.

Vol. 3 contains "To the sons of Burns, after visiting the grave of their father."

Vol. 5 contains the poem beginning—

"'There,' said a Stripling, pointing with meet pride."

Curse on an ungrateful man, that can be pleased,
And not can starve the author of the pleasure!

Thou, merriest brother in Misfortune,
Be dat my eldest Brother in the muse,
With tears I hitch thy unhappy fate!
O! thou is the Bard unfitted for the world,
Not made to share in of its pleasures!

Burns "was living in Ellisland when Captain Grose, on his peregrinations through Scotland, staid some time at Carse House in the neighbourhood, with Captain Robert Riddel of Glenriddel. . . . Robert requested of Captain Grose, when he should come to Ayrshire, that he would make a drawing of Alloway Kirk, as it was the burial-place of his father. . . . ; and added, by way of encouragement, that it was the scene of many a good story of witches and apparitions, of which he knew the captain was very fond. The captain agreed to the request, provided the poet would furnish a witch-story, to be printed along with it. 'Tam o' Shanter' was produced on this occasion, and was first published in Grose's Antiquities of Scotland."—Gilbert Burns.

To Miss Betsy Lewis

Where be the volumes, Betsy fair,
And with them take the Poet's prayer; —
That Fate may in her fairest page,
With every kindliest, best presage
Of future bliss, enroll thy name;
While native worth, & spotless fame,
And wakeful caution to beware
Of all, but chief man's fetter-snare;
All blameless joys on earth we find,
And all the treasures of the mind —
These be thy guardian & Reward!
So prays thy faithful friend, the Bard

Presentation Copy. To John M'Murdo, Esquire, Drumlanrig, from Robert Burns, the Poet.

"To John M'Murdo, Esquire,
Drumlanrig.

"Will Mr. M'Murdo do me the favor to accept of these volumes; a trifling but sincere mark of the very high respect I bear for his worth as a man, his manners as a gentleman, and his kindness as a friend. However inferior now, or afterwards, I may rank as a Poet; one honest virtue, to which few Poets can pretend, I trust I shall ever claim as mine:—to no man, whatever his station in life, or his power to serve me, have I ever paid a compliment at the expense of truth.

THE AUTHOR."

Copy of verses written on a pane of glass in Mr. M'Murdo's house by Burns. Photograph Portrait of Burns, after Nasmyth.

15. Poems, chiefly in the Scottish Dialect. By Robert Burns. To which are added several other pieces not contained in any former edition of his Poems, and a Life of the Author. Glasgow: Printed and sold by Chapman & Lang, Booksellers and Stationers, Trongate. 1801.

Portrait by Anderson, Perth.

A copy without portrait, uncut, in original covers. Size 6⅞ in. × 4¼ in.

putting a tomb-stone over another, he may, with grateful surprise, thank Heaven that ever he saw a farthing of it. —
With the remainder of the money, pay yourself the "Office of a Messenger" that I owe you, & send me by Mr. Clarke a note of its price. — Send me likewise the fifth volume of the Observer by Mr. Clarke; & if any money remain, let it stand to account.
My best Compliments to Mrs Hill. — I sent you a Mankin by last week's Fly, which I hope you rec.d. —
